No Freezing Allowed on Bike Ride to Brunsville

The temperature topped out at only 35 degrees on Saturday, February 22, but that didn't stop bicyclists from rolling into Brunsville that morning. Sponsored by Bike Central of Le Mars, the DNF Ride, or "Do Not Freeze!" Ride, included approximately 25 cyclists from Le Mars and beyond including Hinton, Kingsley, Cherokee, Des Moines and Jefferson, SD.

Participants of Bike Central's DNF Ride relax outside the Corner Café.

Participants started peddling from the store located on Central Avenue and convened late morning at Brunsville's Corner Café, which co-owner Andrea Raasch had opened specially for them. Riders enjoyed spending time at the restaurant for a couple hours before heading back to Le Mars.

The ride was brainchild of Kevin Richards, owner of Bike Central, who, like many others, was tired of being cooped up inside during an exceptionally cold winter.

Mark Strub, store manager, gave more than one reason why Brunsville was chosen as the event's destination.

"It's an easy ride, the hospitality, and we've enjoyed going to the Corner and thought the other riders would enjoy it," he said. "So far, no one's complained about how easy the ride is."

Bike Central's idea is definitely on the right track. Even before heading back to Le Mars one of the riders told Mark, "Thanks for doing this."

Bike Central promotes cycling and sells and services bikes and bike accessories. They hope to make the DNF Ride an annual event.

Thank you to Andrea and the Corner Cafe for your hospitality during Bike Central's DNF (Do Not Freeze!) Ride on Feb. 22nd!

All of the participants were very complimentary of the atmosphere, food and drink and wanted to extend their appreciation to the Corner Cafe and Brunsville for helping make DNF at great event!

—Mark Strub, Kevin Richards and Monte Brent of Bike Central in Le Mars

SCHOLAR OF THE MONTH

G.D.

Back in the Day: John Lambert Recalls the Blacksmith Shop & Lumberyard

I remember the blacksmith shop quite well. I used to take things up to get them fixed. I really liked to see Alex use the forge. He would heat the iron until it was white hot and then pound it into any shape he wanted.

Also, there used to be lumberyard across the street to the south. It was quite large and the office was separate. Alvin Jelken used to run it for several years. I used to buy lumber and bolts from there when I started farming. He had bolts, screws, shells for guns and tools. I bought quite a bit of lumber from there. Later years they tore it down. He used to have a hardware store there also and during the earlier years also sold coal that would come in by railbox car. He had some coal bins by the track and he would hire 2 or 3 guys to unload the car and fill the bins. They would have to scoop and carry the coal to the bins. It would take a couple of days to unload it.

Alvin had a small scale by the office that he would weigh small amounts on, approximately 100 pounds or so.
